

16-HOUR TRAINING SEMINAR

CONFLICT MANAGEMENT TECHNIQUES

FOR CORRECTIONS SUPERVISORS

The #1 reason jails in the United States are involved in litigation remains due to sustained injuries from physical altercations. What if lawsuits surrounding physical altercations and conflict could be reduced?

The National Institute for Jail Operations (NIJO) Conflict Management Techniques training will help Corrections Supervisors do just that; effectively manage those in their charge reducing conflict through proven emotional techniques.

Jail Supervisors are tasked not only with maintaining the custody and security of an institution and the inmates, but also the line staff and corrections officers working within it. This hands-on course will provide real life examples and practice scenarios for attendees to work through as they gain knowledge on not only the causes of conflict, but the proven tactics that will effectively manage conflict within their facility.
